

Jeannie Patton earned Bachelor's and Master's degrees in English from the University of Northern Colorado. She was a writer, journalist, and public relations specialist, and enjoyed a ten-year career teaching college English and Literature prior to joining TNC in 2004.

She is an award-winning author of 150+ newspaper and magazine articles ranging from skiing and outdoor sports to western ecology and social commentary.

Following a three-year administration and communications position at the University of Colorado Natural Resources Law Center, she joined TNC's Global Fire Initiative team. She manages and writes for the LANDFIRE team's internal and external websites, tweets for @nature_LANDFIRE, develops newsletters and targeted mailings, co-writes blogs and provides administrative support. She lives in Boulder, CO.